An Alleged Bank Examiner.

[By tolegraph to the Dispatch.]

Washington, February 10.—Information has reached the Comptroller of the Currency to the effect that a man calling himself E. McGregor, who was at Topeka, Kan. from January 6th to the 21st, claimed that he was an examiner of national banks. The Comptroller says that as there is no examiner of this name it will be well for the bank officers to be on their guard against this individual and explore his history.

Washington Notes. Special telegram to the Dispatch. Exervites, Va., February 10.—There was an enthusiastic meeting to-day of the farmers of this country for the purpose of forming a farmers' club to take into consideration matters pertaining to their interests. The most important matter discussed was the subject of country roads. It was decaded to circulate petitions praying the State Legislature to pass for Northshipton country the road-law, the principal leatures of which are the combination of the contract and labor systems. It is also proposed that the tax received from the milroad, which amounts to $500, be applied to the country roads.

Captain Orris A. Brown, manager of Hollywood truck-farm, the largest in Virginia, William B. Wilson, George G. Savage, and others spoke in favor of these measures. Washington Notes.

Washington, February 10.—The cotton returns of the Department of Agriculture for February give the local estimates of the proportion of the crop which has left the plantations. The Democrats insisted on this because they want to make Reed's arbitrary course in counting what he calls a constitutional quorum as odicus as possible. A dispatch just received says he crossed the Idaho-Montana line this morning. All of the Democratic senators are now out of the State, and the Senate is without a quorum. A BOLD FORGERY

Is What Senator McPherson Declares His

Signature. (By telegraph to the Dispatch.)

Washington, February 10.—The House Committee on the Ohio Ballot-box Forgery resumed its session this morning and called Senator Stockbridge, of Michigan, to the stand. He was shown Exhibit "A" (the forged paper) and denied having signed it or knowing anything about the hallot-box bill or contract. He added that the forged signature of his name was not a good initiation of his signature.

Senator McPherson, of New Jersey, the next witness, said he had a number of occupations, but had no ballot-box industry among them. He also knew nothing of the forged paper and declared his signature a bold forgery, and a bad one at that. Witness having referred to the ballot-box matter as a conspiracy, Mr. Turner asked if he knew anything of the conspiracy in that connection. (By telegraph to the Dispatch.)

He replied that since the gentlemen had He replied that since the gentlemen had had atundant opportunity to ascertain the falsity of such a charge, but hastened instead to give it to the world, it might be regarded as a conspiracy.

Governor Foraker inquired if it would not depend on the circumstances under which the paper had been procured and the apparent proof to support its character. Senator McPherson replied that as the paper, if genuine, would degrade and ruin public men, and properly so, they should have been consulted when it was possible to do so by travelling four or five miles. His first impulse on reading the publication had been to have every man connected with it arrested within forty-eight hours. Governor Foraker: Hadn't you bester do that yet, Senator? In his humiliation and attempt to remedy the wrong, which changed the situation somewhat.

John L. Pfau, of Cincinnati, told of a conversation he had with Wood after his release from prison. Wood had remarked that nobody whose name was on the paper had had him arrested, and that he had to stand the brunt of the whole business. In answer to witness Wood had said that Messrs, Foraker and Halstead believed the paper to be genume. Witness told this to Mr. Halstead, who said of course he believed so. Wood had further said to witness that they were contented with Mr. Foraker and never expected to trap any more: that they never expected to trap Mr. Halstead. Wood said that he (Wood) had been made the innocent tool to trap Mr. Foraker. He didn't say who had used him as a tool; but when witness suggested Mr. John McLean and Mr. T. O. Campbell he acknowledged that he wasn't far off.

To Mr. Turner witness said he believed, that Wood's exact words were "to catch Foraker." Wood had outlined the plan to be to have Mr. Foraker published in the paper; then come out and prove it to be a forgery and crush Foraker. Wood said he didn't see that until the thing was over and he was the innocent tool, for he had no

A TERRIFIC STORM.

In answer to further questioning on the point by Messrs. Turner and Wilson witness said that his understanding of the natter was that Wood had failed to get an original paper from MeLean and then had drawn up a forged copy from memory, which he had supplied to Mr. Foraker. Mr. McLean knew this (so witness gathered from what Wood said) and was just waiting for Mr. Foraker to use it to expose the forgery.

ing for Mr. Foraker to use it to expose the forgery.

Lewis M. Hadden was recalled for cross-examination. To Mr. Grosvenor he said that on June 28th he had told Mr. Foraker that he believed there was written evidence that Messrs. Campbell. Butterworth, and McKinley were finally interested in the ballot-box wish to Mrs. Wood because he had not been asked. There were gentlemen at the table who knew he had paid Mrs. Wood money, and he expected to be examined about it. It hadshipped his memory at that time. But the evening of the day he testified before the committee he recalled it, and told Kurtz that he was surprised that he had not been questioned on that point. Mr. Foraker knew of it. He had expected the examination to be committeed next day, but the committee had adjourned for two weeks.

SPRING CAMPAIGN.

The spring campaign for city offices promises to be a very lively one. All of the incumbents have opposition, and it is learned that more candidates will aunounce themselves before the convention meets. The Republicans are quiet and seem to be watching the fight amongst the Democrats with interest. It is not thought that the Republicans will put any ticket in the field at all unless there is a split in the Democratic party, which is highly improbable.

RIACKSTONE, VA., February 10, 1890.

St. Luke's (the Episcopal church at this place) caught fire yesterday during services. The house was full of people, and it is remarkable that no one was injured in the frantic efforts of the congregation to get outside. At the conclusion of the morning service the alarm was given, and the congregation, amid the greatest confusion, rushed towards the door.

[By telegraph to the Dispatch.]

Nashau, N. H., February 10.—The employes in the carding-room of the Nashau Company, about 140 in number, who have thus far refrained from joining the striking operatives, this afternoon organized and notified Agent Shaw that they were desirens of having their pay restored. The striking mule-spinners and weavers held protracted meetings this afternoon, at which Agent Shaw's proposition to submit the questions at issue to the Board of Arbitration was discussed. It was argued that two men selected by the corporation and two selected by the strikers might not be able to agree upon the fifth member of the board and in the mean time the employes would still be at the mercy of the employers as heretofore. Both meetings decided not to accept the agent's proposition. The result of to-night's conference is generally regretted by the community, as a protracted strike is now certain.
